One main theme of the week: a ton of new education bills filed. Some of the hot topics among these new filings included, but were not limited to: 1) school calendar flexibility; 2) digital learning, internet access for public schools, and use of lottery funds for the same; 3) homeschooling tax credit; and 4) multiplication tables and cursive writing.

Another obvious highlight of the week was Governor McCrory's State of the State Address on Monday night. Continuing our efforts on education innovation, collaboration among pre-k – college communities, learning through technology, and the flexibility to use lottery money for technology and digital learning were some key points. If you missed the Governor’s address, please see this link: http://www.governor.nc.gov/video

Additionally, there were several Education Committee meetings this week, which are addressed in the next section. Superintendent Atkinson and others on DPI's leadership team gave presentations to the House and Senate Education Committees. For a more in-depth view of these presentations and others, please visit our Education Legislation page and click on “Committee Meetings” “2013 Committee Presentations.” http://legislative.ncpublicschools.gov/

Key Committee Meetings: February 19-21

1. Joint Appropriations Subcommittee on Education
   This Subcommittee met each morning again this week, Tuesday through Thursday. General Assembly Fiscal Research staff members presented data on public school budget issues and allotments. Legislators asked questions on a wide range of education subjects, such as: a) charter school funding; b) the relationships between class size, teacher effectiveness and student performance; c) funding flexibility; d) salary schedules; e) low wealth/small county supplements; f) classroom internet connectivity; g) the ADM adjustment (also known as the discretionary cut or negative reserve); and h) flexibility with lottery funds.

2. House Education Committee
   On Tuesday, Superintendent Atkinson and Adam Levinson, Race to the Top Director, gave an overview of Race to the Top and the status of our initiatives and progress. The Committee showed a great deal of interest and asked many productive questions.

3. Senate Education Committee
   On Wednesday, Superintendent Atkinson and Dr. Rebecca Garland gave a presentation on the Implementation of the Founding Principles Act. This was so well-received by this Committee that the House Education Committee requested the same presentation next week on Tuesday, February 26.
4. Senate State and Local Government Committee
SB 42 Charter School/Govt. Unit was removed from the Committee's agenda this week.
