A new legislative short session began this week, and state lawmakers are hitting the ground running. Legislators filed a flurry of bills, some of which impact public schools as listed below in the section, “Relevant Bills with Action this Week.” This Legislative Update will be rolling out nearly every Friday during session to offer the week’s big education news from Jones Street.

The main event this week was the unveiling of Governor Pat McCrory's recommended budget for the upcoming fiscal year. This budget is one of three proposals (i.e., Governor's, House's, Senate's) that will be introduced, debated, and ultimately the final 2016 Budget will be enacted. It is important to bear in mind a couple of things with this recommended budget: 1) it is only a recommendation; therefore, it is a starting point or guidepost for legislators to begin their work on the adjustments to the budget here in the second year of the 2015-2016 Biennium, and 2) the legislators’ work ahead is to make adjustments to the 2015 enacted budget, for the 2016-2017 year.

Key education highlights from the Governor’s recommended budget are as follows:
